Domus Design Group Opens Its New Showroom At San Francisco Design Center

The widest selection of materials and finishes is now available to the Bay Area home owners, designers, and architects for the European style custom and semi-custom kitchen cabinetry, bathrooms, wardrobes, and other residential areas.

San Francisco, California, December 1, 2006 – Domus Design Group announced today that it has opened its new showroom at the San Francisco Design Center Showplace at 2 Henry Adams Street, suite 337. The showroom displays the company's four major lines: kitchens and bathrooms, wardrobes, sliding doors, and custom furniture.

Our kitchen and bathroom lines are represented by two well-known and most reputable German brands like Almillmo and Schueller Kitchens who have become leaders in European cabinet manufacturing over the past 50 years. "Domus Design Group has built an exciting combination of the materials and finishes and introduced them into the areas of the home that previously could not be imagined to have such a wide variety and were previously designed around more traditional oak, cherry, and maple finishes. We are supplying kitchen cabinets in olive, ebony, macassar, lemon tree, zebrano, palisander, and many other finishes", said Alex Kulikov, president of Domus Design Group. "We are especially proud to work with the manufacturers who have been recognized for their innovation and design throughout the world. We have also made these finishes and materials available not only to the individual clients but also to the developers and builders for the residential mid-rise and high-rise projects that will change San Francisco City skyline over the next few years".

Over the next two years, many of the residential projects in San Francisco and in the Bay Area will see our product. We are also working on and supplying kitchen and bathroom cabinetry to many other projects in different parts of the United States like Honolulu, Los Angeles, Chicago, Boston, Baltimore, New York, and Ft. Lauderdale. "We have rolled up our sleeves and put a shovel into the ground," said Andrey Voronin, Director of Operations of Domus Design Group. "We have positioned ourselves to offer not only the best and most affordable price to our project partners, but also the best of finishes, equipment, and design, not experienced so far and only recently seemed unimaginable. We really hope that our product will add a significant interest from the home buyers to the finishes, equipment, quality, and value offered by the residential project developers and builders”. The architecture of the buildings that are currently under development and construction is quite unique. Our goal is to make our unique product quality available to these residential developments.

Our wardrobes, sliding doors, and custom furniture are represented by Schmalenbach Design who is recognized for its great design, German engineering, precision, and highest industry quality. Our modern and classic wardrobes offer the largest and quite unique collection of accessories, finishes, storage solutions, and design combinations to our clients, to designers, and architects. Our wardrobes have no limitations on the dimension and finishes. While our product is custom built in Germany, it is more affordable than many other semi-custom, modular-style products available from other European manufacturers.

Among other brands displayed at the showroom are Miele Appliances, Caesar Stone, Hera Lighting, and Verpan (Vernon Panton) Design Lighting.

Our philosophy is that one does not have to pay the top price for the top quality product. Just look at the examples and the progress in technology, communications, and automobile design among others. Many of the consumer products just recently available to the few are now available to many of us. We make these high quality products that we represent affordable by increasing our productivity and efficiency, by increasing turnover and by lowering overheads, by constantly searching for the best and most reliable suppliers, and by staying on top of the industry and technology changes. The end result is the cost of the product to the consumer that is significantly reduced by our business operation.

Domus Design Group is happy to provide such a unique resource to the designers and architects who work on the kitchen, bathroom, wardrobe, office, library, entertainment centers, and other living room furniture areas, and we appreciate all the interest that the design and architectural community has given us over the past several years. Domus Design Group wants to be known for such great resource of finishes, products, and options available to our clients. We offer an unsurpassed attention to detail and our product is the best example of that. We hope that our product will at least be considered and looked at as part of the variety of other options currently available in the market.

We are especially happy to be a part of the San Francisco Design Center where we see such a wonderful group of neighbors – showrooms and their owners and employees who produce such a great energy, design creativity, professionalism, and such generosity and availability of help that we only hope to become an integral part of this family.
